Success of the Farm Demonstration Work

T. Z. ATKESON MAKES INTERESTING REPORT OF HIS EXPERIENCE

Columbia, Ala., Nov. 20.—That the farmer experts are making a pronounced success in their demonstration work can be more readily understood when it is known that they themselves are practical as well as scientific farmers as the following report from Mr. T. Z. Atkeson, the demonstrator of Houston county, will show. Mr. Atkeson has made a special study of cotton and cotton diseases, and was one of the demonstrators selected at the recent meeting in Auburn to do the farmers institute work of Alabama, he gives in the report below the results of his study of the cotton wilt.

For the past several years in central and south Alabama and Georgia a cotton disease that has cost the farmers of these sections hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, it is commonly called "wilt," "blackroot," "blight," and "rootrot." Of all these terms perhaps "wilt" is the more expressive since it more nearly describes the disease than any of its other common names.

For the past seven or eight years the United States government has had its experts toward finding a variety of cotton resistant to the disease and splendid results have been obtained. Two of the many varieties tried out have stood the tests of the agriculturist. These two, known as "Dillon" and "Dixie," belong to two widely divergent types of cotton, the Dillion being a hold-up variety of the old Jackson, or "Jackson Limbless," and the "Dixie" a branching stalked plant resembling the Peterkin type. The wilt resistance of these two is about the same and averages around 85 per cent.

About six years ago Mr. Thos. Z. Atkeson, who is at present special agent for Houston county in the farmers' co-operative demonstration work was confronted with this disease within almost every field on his plantation. He got into communication with the United States Department of Agriculture and acting on their advice tried out both the Dillon and the Dixie varieties. The Dillion was diseased the first season on account of its manner of growth, since it is not at all symmetrical. The Dixie, while although it did not fruit so closely, has a beautifully shaped stalk and manner of growth, was chosen. The first year special selections of seed were made. Selections were made from these selections the second year, and each year following until the present time. After five years of careful selection a wonderful change has taken place in the plant. It sits its fruit closer. Its shape has been slightly changed. It is much earlier than any other strain of wilt resistant cotton, and, above all, careful records kept of seed sold by Mr. Atkeson the past two seasons have failed to show a loss of over one per cent due to wilt. This is a remarkable showing, but may be easily verified.

In the interview a few days ago with Mr. L. W. Killebrew, of Columbia, he said: "I bought last spring from Mr. Atkeson a bushel of his Atkeson Dixie cotton seed and with these planted a test plat of 1 1-4 acres that had died about 33 1-3 per cent from cotton wilt the former season. I used 400 pounds of complete fertilizer at the time of planting and $200 as a side application. The young plants came up well and went at once to growing. I examined the plants often for sign of wilt and during the entire season found only four plants in the entire field. I also kept a record of the healthy bolls that opened. The first boll to open did so in exactly ninety days after the seed were planted."

Other farmers in this section who have tried the same seed claim that the same results are practically the results they have had and they are gaining full confidence in the demonstration work as attested by the big bale to-the acre club formed at Columbia in which [illegible] eighty six farmers including six negroes who have grown more than a bale of the fleecy staple to the acre, the only club of its kind on record.

ASKS POLICE FOR AID, IS ARRESTED

YOUNG MAN SAYS HE HAS FORGOTTEN HIS NAME AND PAST LIFE

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 19.—A well dressed young man called at police headquarters yesterday and asked for aid in discovering his identity. He said he had forgotten his name and remembered nothing of his past life.

The police made an investigation and answered the youth's inquiry today by informing him that he is J. W. Hill, of Detroit, and that he is wanted in various cities for having passed fictitious checks. He was arrested and is held on two charges preferred by a San Francisco hotel and by a member of a theatrical company now playing here. The young man denies all knowledge of the crimes with which he is charged and the hospital physicians who examined him believe they have discovered a remarkable case of amnesia or alternating personality.

Police Identify Man

According to a report to the police Hill left Detroit after forging checks and was traced to Salt Lake City where he married a Miss Sweeny with whom he went to Southern California. When Hill appeared at police headquarters he answered the reports and description which included the mention of a withered arm and a tatoo mark on the right arm. Hill who is of good appearance and apparently a man of education and refinement, was known as H. S. Whalen and frequented fashionable hotels here. Physicians who have examined him expressed the opinion that his story is not a fabrication.

A crumpled bit of paper found in the bottom of a comb case carried by Hill, proved to be an order on a San Francisco bank from H. Gardiner of Lancaster, Pa., for $250. Hill said he had borrowed the comb case from a man on a train and knew nothing of the order.

LUMBER MILL IS DAMAGED BY FIRE

DRY KILNS AND MILL BURN YESTERDAY MORNING ABOUT $8,000 DAMAGE

Fire yesterday morning badly damaged the lumber plant of Merkle & Whitten, located on the Central of Georgia Railway in the eastern part of the city. The fire occurred about 8 o'clock in the morning and the origin is unknown. The mill and dry kilns were destroyed and other damage resulted from the flames. The lumber sheds were saved by the fire company and also a long line of freight cars, loaded with compressed cotton which were on the tracks near the mill. The loss is estimated at between $8 000 and $9 000 with insurance to cover it.

CAN'T SEE ELECTROCUTION

Richmond, Va., Nov. 19.—Superintendent Wood of the state penitentiary announced today that reporters would not be admitted to the death chamber on Friday morning next when Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., is electrocuted for the murder of his wife. Under a state law Virginia newspapers are not permitted to publish details of an electrocution. Reference to the Beattie murder was made by several ministers in their sermons today.

Dr. H. D. C. Maclachlan, pastor of Seventh Street Christian Church, said that while he believed in Beattie's guilt he was of the opinion that a brief respite should have been granted so that Paul Beattie's affidavit could be investigated.

ROAD WILL PAY BACK HALF OF SUBSCRIPTION AND FOR HALF OF LAND

The case of the City of Dothan vs. the Atlanta and St. Andrews Bay Railway Company has been thrown out of court and settled by the parties reaching an agreement, the defendant agreeing to pay back one-half of the subscription money received from Dothan and to pay one-half of the value of the land given them.

As will be remembered, on the promise of the road to erect their shops and a large mill in Dothan, the citizens here agreed to give $15,000 subscription money, to be paid in installments of one-third. One-third of the money was paid, but the remainder of it which has been in local banks since being subscribed was held on a bill taken out in chancery court. The road attorneys and the attorneys for the city reached an agreement over the matter by the road agreeing to allow the city to keep one half of the money in the bank and also to pay for one half of the thirty seven acres of land which was given the corporation also.

This Indian Summer seems to be coming to Alabama in sections, and must be a whopper when it all finally arrives.

From the published picture of the Kansas school teacher, who was tarred and feathered, it doesn't seem that she needed it.

Now that Hoke Smith has expressed the willingness to turn the state of Georgia over to other hands, we have hopes of the politics of that state cooling off.

The Commercial-Appeal has hopes for China if she becomes a republic, and thinks it is time for her people to begin the use of steel pins instead of feather dusters to write with.

A few years back there was a cry over the country about a scarcity of jobs, but living was lower than it is now. At the present no man is out of work because he cannot find it.

Blood may be thicker than water alright, but is a mighty poor substitute. Syrup is thicker than water, and so is axle grease, and castor oil, and we tell you this to keep down that comparison.

Once or twice a year we do have a little weather, which doesn't seem to be on the schedule, but as a whole we have a better grade of weather than the average reader of railroad folders of the Pacific Coast would have you believe.

Where is the old fashion man who laid in his jug of Christmas liquor early?—Atlanta Journal. Drank it up, filed a back-order and is hanging around the express office like a dog at squirrel cleaning.

No one in this country, who paid any attention at all to big cockleburs, failed to make a good crop, and they are all well matured and sound. They always are. They are never nipped off before their period of usefulness is reached

Germany's crown prince probably wouldn't have been heard from over in this country but for the fact that his boyish enthusiasm caused him to cheer the opposition to the prime minister the other day. Now he is referred to as the Theodore Roosevelt of the German Empire

Because the New Jersey mule kicked himself to death after he had drank a quart of whiskey was no criticism on the mule but on the grade of whiskey prepared for people to use. He saw his mistake, and didn't put any stock in being able to "take a drink or let it alone."

If Dr. Denny fails to make good at the University of Alabama, it will not be the fault of the publicity department. The papers of Alabama have advertised that man almost as much as they have Underwood, since he was elected president of the college. It is hoped that he will soon knuckle down to business and let us see what he has up his sleeve.

Something will keep rattling in the governor's mansion deal with the alrod. Some claim that the mattress and window ... would have ... with the building, along with two ... in the ... and ... for all ... attend to their ...

With reference to the moving picture business the Washington Star is of the opinion that it would be a long step toward reform if the picture posters would give us more of the girl who helps mother, and less of the Beulah Binfords, Nan Pattersons and Evelyn Thaws. The latter class only draws the curious, and no impression that helps humanity is gained

There don't seem to be any decent opposition to Secretary Wilson's talked of resignation. That old farmer got mixed up in the Dr. Wiley business in a way that didn't reflect credit to a man of his age, and whisker hobble, and his usefulness to the government is over. People will no longer plant his seed samples, nor read his dope on cattle tick

Kentucky is bidding for fame through another route. It has produced a million dollar crop of turkeys, so it is said. One county sold forty thousand turkeys, for which it received fifty thousand dollars. That probably accounts for some of the feuds of that state. No man ever kept a drove of turkeys in the country, about the only place they can be raised, and stayed on good terms with his neighbors. Not if his neighbors lived nearer than ten miles.

It is a mistake about ex-President Diaz applying for the job in China, in case they decide they need an official of that kind. Diaz is a man who has worked at the job for a good many years, and in America, is termed a good loser. He hasn't claimed fraud or filed a protest, since he left Mexico, neither has he come out in a card through the papers, and told them how they should run the government. He has been decent since he was kicked out of that country, and if he didn't do anything to make the people of Mexico love him while he governed the people, they should build a monument to his memory now, that he let by-gones be by-gones.

We thought all along that Mrs Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools for the city of Chicago, was getting too much notice to keep out of trouble. First place, she was elected to the position that pays $10,000 over a man applicant. The school board thought she was the best man of the two, no doubt. But she made a mistake. She introduced Polish as a study in the school, claiming that so many Polish children despise the language of their fathers. Mrs. Young didn't seem to take into court that Polish children born and educated in this country feel but little need of the language of their parents

KEEP IT GOING

The school boys of Montgomery are in great glee over the prospects of shutting down the schools. From the reports it would seem that the finances of the school are so balled up till it looks like new arrangements will have to be made to keep the teachers paid off. Montgomery, with such a small per cent. of illiteracy, shouldn't let a little matter of money stop a good school

It might help out matters a little for the people to go down in their pockets and rough up the tuition, like we do here to a great extent

It doesn't matter what comes up, the business heads of Montgomery shouldn't let her schools suffer. Arrangements should be made to keep the children in school

WE HAVE IT

The aviators have discovered something, along with air currents, dips and glides, and the frost in aeroplanes. They have discovered "aviator's disease." That is something that effects them while in the air. They fly into places in the air that strangely effect them and make them careless, and lose control of the machiner.

Strange. We have had that disease all the time. We never knew what it was, but we knew it was dangerous and wouldn't take any chances.

You have never heard of us taking a flight, and probably will not, till the doctors go into executive ... with a bunch of foreigners, ... this is a disease. They will probably ... on a lot of ... before ... for ... but they ... we take any ...

ENCOURAGING.

Whenever a county in Alabama votes on bond issue, for good roads, ... That looks good and shows that the people are getting posted on the value of good roads to a community

The fight will have to come up in Houston county some time. There is no way of knowing what the people of this county think about it till it is submitted to the people. The people usually know how to settle those things. Not all the time do they settle them right the first time, but later it all comes right.

It is doubtful if you could find a man in the county opposed to good roads. You might find some who didn't agree as to the best methods of getting them. Then all we have to go by is past experiences. We have not built them, except the work the road commission has done within the last year or so. Other counties that have good roads didn't build them till the county was bonded for the money. It looks like then that bonding the county is the safest and most popular way of securing the funds

In every county you will find men with political aspirations and with an eye on a job, who are talking against the proposition. They cannot offer a better way to get good roads. If they can the people should hear them

NEGRO AND THE FOREIGNER

"In Birmingham the negro has not been able to hold his own against the foreigner," says the Birmingham Ledger.

The Ledger thinks the shoeshining business has been polished out from under the negro, because the negro wouldn't stay on the job all the time. The foreigner is there, waiting for you every hour, while the negro is more careless, and is out of pocket sometimes.

Most Southerners, like the Ledger says, had rather for a negro to do many of those little jobs than foreigners, or anyone else, but by the negro not sticking to his stand all the time the business has been transferred to some extent in the cities.

In Dothan business has greatly changed. The negro commands patronage when he is prepared to do the job when wanted, and the people here rather prefer paying the money to the negro, knowing that it isn't buried or sent to another country, but if the negro don't look to his laurels he will have to get out for another job

Everything that the negro is a specialist in, from waiter to shoeshiner, strong competition is springing up.

WHAT COULD THEY EXPECT?

Down here in this section of Alabama we have known for some time that the government worked a hardship on prohibition territory when it issued whiskey license, but it seems that this important question was never thought of till Jefferson went safe for liquor once again. The saloon men, who bought and paid their money for the right to sell whiskey, find that there are other men who didn't go to that expense, are using the permit the government issues, and not having to go before the excise commission

We don't know whether it is a fault with the excise commission or not, for not issuing the blind tiger boys license—all that applied. It probably would have done away with blind tigers

When one reads the list of the liquor license holders of Jefferson county it sounds too much like the detention list at Ellis Island, where immigrants are held for further orders. They don't sound American enough for Alabama, and so long as great industrial centers like Birmingham, bid for this class of foreigners, they are liable to have something happening in politics. They don't look at the situation as we do "bred born and raised in this country"

THAT DINNER IS TOO COSTLY

Oscar Underwood's enthusiastic friends in Jefferson county are fixing to put him in bad light. They are giving him a banquet, which is to be paid for by people who want that kind of eating, at ten dollars a plate. That is enough, thinks the Greensboro Watchman to feed one pretty high for a week. It will do better than that, down here where Alabama yams, Alabama raised hams and Alabama raised cane syrup are plentiful, and Mr. Underwood isn't getting his presidential boom close to the working man by running with a crowd who will pay ten dollars for one dinner or supper, or breakfast. A man would have to be in an awful condition to eat ten dollars worth of stuff and if we ran a hotel and such a one registered, we'd fire the cook and close the house.

Oscar Underwood probably didn't have a thing in the world to do with this ten dollar dinner business, but he ought to protest. Let's see, wasn't it Bryan that sat down to a famous Democratic dollar dinner one time. Amounted to nothing, of course, but it was not because the price was cheap, within the reach of all.

Some may figure that it would cheapen the Alabamian to dicker around with a cheap dinner, but we don't think it will. This is Alabama you know, and not Pittsburg, or New York, and a young and tender presidential boom cannot be too particular as to the company it keeps.

JUST LIKE SOME MEN

We heard a croaking noise while walking along the street the other day, in the residence section. We saw an old rooster acting mighty queer. It looked as if he had something down in the fence jam giving it a good whipping. Whatever it was, made no effort to fight back. We got closer, and found that the old rooster had beat up a younger one. The younger one, tired of running, jammed his head down in the corner of the fence for protection, and the old one was picking enough feathers out to make a sofa pillow. Blood was flowing, and the old rooster, would stop and call the attention of the hens to the manner in which he was conducting the fight. They were not interested, as they were enjoying the first opportunity they had in some time eating the worms they found instead of having the old rooster run off with them

That old rooster reminded us of some men. He had worked his bluff on the gawky youngster, but a rooster from the next yard could have made him dig. Only when he jammed his head in the fence jam for protection, he would have squalled when bits of feathers and skin were pulled off.

Probably the younger rooster deserved the beating he got. He might have been poking fun at the old one in some manner, but we felt like toting one of Charlie Faulk's game roosters long enough to turn loose on the old one.

SMALL BOY TOOK PICTURE OF SISTER IN WORK RIG

Now She Has to Pay Him 25 Cents for a Print Each Time Her Best Beau Is to Call, and Youth Rejoices.

Perhaps the orneriest, meanest small boy extant lives in New York. This boy's sister, who is of marriageable age, gave him a cheap camera for his birthday recently. The boy used his camera for legitimate purposes for a few days, but that way of using the machine finally palled upon him and he thought up a scheme.

He waited until his sister got herself rigged out for her share of the work in the weekly housecleaning. Then, unbeknownst to her, he took a full-length snapshot of her just as she was. The young woman is pretty and decidedly winsome looking, but this negative, taken of her by her small brother, shows her standing with a broom in her hand, clad in a loose, voluminous, ornate calico wrapper, with a towel tied around her head and with her curl-papered hair, giving her the appearance of a beetle.

The boy developed the negative and made a print of it. When he showed it to his sister she thought it was rather funny, not suspecting the "edge" which the negative gave the small boy over her.

"He's a-comin' tonight, ain't he?" said the small boy after showing his sister the print.

"He? Who? Mind your own business, kid!" said the sister after the manner of sisters thus addressed by younger brothers in such connections.

"He's a-comin' tonight, repeated the small boy. How much do you give me for the picture of you?"

Then she saw the connection.

"Why, you little incorrigible!" she said, "what do you—"

"Gimme a quarter and I won't show it to him," said the boy in a business like tone.

And he stood pat. Expostulations and pleadings didn't go. He held out for his terms, which were 25 cents payable in advance, no more, no less.

She promptly tore it up and put it in the fire. But the boy still had the negative hidden away, and on the very next occasion when his sister's young man was due to call in the evening he sprang another print from the negative upon her. He got another quarter for the surrender of this print, too.

He knows a good thing when he has got it, does this extraordinarily mean small boy, and he has been flashing one of the prints from the negative upon his sister every night upon which her beau is due for a visit. She has offered him $1 for the negative, but the boy prefers to draw interest instead of sacrificing his principal, and he retains possession of the negative up to the hour of going to press.

A Strike on Babel.

The confusion of tongues and dire ills destined part, work on the tower of Babel being pretty much suspended, when all at once Welsh ones and fights the racket.

The round of consonants being pronounced without the help of a vowel was at once seen to cause no small uneasiness in high quarters.

"No one regarding the business," these hastily exclaimed and forthwith called a halt.

As for Welsh, what was done could not, of course, be undone; but the resulting distribution of languages happily relegated it to the remote corners of a remote island of the sea, so that the embarrassment was by no means what it might have been.—Puck.

Smith's Apron Saves Youth.

One boy was drowned while his brother was saved in Slippery Rock creek, says a dispatch from Kilwood City, Pa. Edward Majors the village blacksmith, threw out his leather apron to the struggling bathers. Rex Cooper, fourteen years old, grasped the apron and—the air under it acting as a buoy—succeeded in reaching the shore. His brother William, twelve years old was drowned. The blacksmith left his anvil and ran a quarter of a mile when he heard the boys call for help.

"Railways" and "Railroads.

We are all speaking of "railways" now instead of "railroads" as they do in America. Both words seem to be of about equal age in this country. Cobbett in 1822 wrote of "rail ways" with the hyphen; Scott in 1831 of "rail roads." But already in 1828 an engineering journal declared that "railway" by this time seemed to be generally adopted as the popular form, though nearly twenty years later Ruskin still talked of "railroads." It is curious that America has preserved the word which remembers the descent of the railway from the old road, while Americans speak of "engineers" and "conductors" where we say "drivers" and "guards," perpetuating the old coaching words.—London Spectator.

In Schurmann's "Secrets de Coulisses" is a picture of Ibsen at the summit of his fame. When Ibsen had completed a new play the Copenhagen newspapers announced the event with a great flourish of trumpets and added: "The master will deposit his manuscript at the National theater at 10 o'clock [illegible] morning." At that hour the [illegible] Ibsen's house and [illegible] was lined with people. [illegible] rolled of paper neatly tied up [illegible] through into the letter box [illegible] public gave a great shout. The [illegible] acknowledged the demonstration with a grave bow and retired within doors with the consciousness of having performed a glorious mission. Every one of his ordinary acts in public was accompanied by something of the sort, and even when he sat the curtains of the window were drawn aside so that his features might be visible to his admirers outside.

She Was Used to Storms

The storm burst forth in all its fury. Great trees were torn up bodily by the roots, houses were unroofed or even wrenched from their foundations, women shrieked and rushed with their children to places of [illegible] safety, while strong [illegible] in the midst of all this fury of nature one little woman sat [illegible] calm [illegible] to notice that anything out of the ordinary was happening. Now and then she raised her eyes from the book that seemed to absorb her, glanced around the room and went back to the literary lore. Afterward we learned that she was a teacher in a primary school and that she hadn't heard or felt anything else wasn't accustomed to.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

But at the sight of his silver chain, his medals, his sword, his gold topped cane and his three cornered hat the Abyssinians could not be expected to know they were in the presence of a mere servant. So bowing low repeatedly they approached him slowly and with great respect until they were within reach of his coattails, which one on either side they seized in their hands and kissed. Bathing In Gold

A Parisian journalist who had speculated in railway shares won 200,000 francs as the result of a lucky venture. Drawing it in gold he proceeded to a hotel, emptied the bags of gold in the bed and went to sleep literally in the sands of Pactolus. The man was so crazed by his good fortune that he found indescribable pleasure in reveling in a golden bath.

Paganini the violinist, when he received the proceeds of his concerts (he insisted upon being paid in gold), used to wash his hands in sovereigns.

A French novelist, Soulie, wrote a book called "The Memoirs of the Devil." It was successful. The publishers paid him for the first volume $10,000 in gold. The author carried the gold to his bedroom, poured it into a foot bath and enjoyed for half an hour the excitement of moving his feet to and fro in a bath of gold coins, smoking meanwhile the biggest of Havanas.

At one point [illegible] little maid apparently offended the "master" deeply. He spoke to her and ended by ordering her to retire. She did so, probably the most broken hearted girl in Kyoto, and the master proceeded to alter her work. The American, who had seen nothing wrong, ventured to ask what was the matter, whereupon he was informed that she had placed twelve leaves in a certain combination instead of thirteen. Twelve, it seems, was the right number 200 years ago, but thought, study, meditation and prayer had led to the discovery that not twelve but thirteen was the correct number for the artistic effect of that particular arrangement. This may seem a trifling alteration, but it suggests Michelangelo's retort in which he pointed out the relation between trifles and perfection.

The parties and witnesses attend before the sheriff and the witnesses confirm on oath the statements of the [illegible] The sheriff thereupon grants warrant to the registrar to register the marriage. The registration can then be completed at once. The whole procedure takes only an hour or two, and the cost is only a few shillings. On the eve of the new year and similar holidays there is a constant procession of newly married couples and their witnesses before the sheriff in Glasgow. The suitors are principally drawn from the artisan classes and the classes below them, but there is usually a sprinkling of a better class.

WAVES AND BILLOWS ON THE ATLANTIC

"As Well as Ever." Is Pastor Russell's Message.

On the Atlantic Returning From Most Successful Lecturing Trip Abroad—Says That Church's Present Experiences Are by Way of Preparation For Her Future Work.

Nov. 19.—"As well as ever, thank God," was Pastor Russell's message to the millions who read his sermons weekly in the secular press. His text was from Psalm xlii, 13, especially the words "All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me." St. David spoke of his own experiences, his own tribulations, but prophetically he represented the Messiah—Head and Body—Jesus and His saintly few gathered during this Age out of all nations, people and parties—"the Church of the First-borns, whose names are written in heaven."—Hebrews xii, 23.

In Love Not in Anger.

The Prophet's experiences—wave after wave of trouble, disappointments, etc.—he knew were not evidences of God's disfavor, but contrariwise proofs of the Heavenly Father's love and care—evidences that he was being taught of God, in preparation for a work which he was to do. He was pursued by Satan's wicked ones and was like an antelope in chase, famished for water. "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, oh! God!" "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God. When shall I come and appear before Thee, oh God? When will my trials, my testing be finished? When shall I be received into everlasting fellowship as the Son of the Highest."

The people in general could not understand how Divine favor could be with one so tempted, so tried, so beset by persecutors, so maligned; as he said, "Mine enemies speak evil of me: When shall he die and his name perish? If he come to see me as a reporter, he speaketh falsely; his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; when he goeth abroad he telleth it." "All that hate me whisper together against me."—Psalm xli, 5-7.

Full of faith St. David would not be overwhelmed. His faith would outride the storms. He would learn his lesson. He would thus demonstrate his faith, his loyalty to God.

The Greater David—Beloved.

Pastor Russell declared the most important feature of St. David's career consisted in the fact that he typified the Messiah—Head and Members. The name David signifies Beloved, and Messiah is the beloved Son of God. He is the Chief or Head over this house of sons, all of whom are God's dear children—Beloved. Then the prophecies of the future in which David figures prominently are properly understood to refer to the great work of Messiah's Kingdom—the Throne of David will be the Throne of Messiah which will be established under the whole heavens.

The waves and billows of trouble which passed over the Prophet David typified the trials and difficulties of the narrow way in which Jesus and His faithful followers of the new creation must walk to attain the promised glory, honor and immortality. St. David's trials of faith and loyalty to God typed the trials and loyalty of Christ Jesus and the Church amid the trials that will come with the end of the present night time, ushering in the New Day, in which Christ will reign in righteousness for the overthrow of sin and death. They may rejoice in hope, knowing that all things are working together for good to them, because they love God supremely. (Romans viii, 28.) "Weeping may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning."—Psalm xxx, 5.

Our Mission Now—and Then.

Sin, the fall, degradation and selfishness have had the effect of hardening the hearts of mankind. They are stony-hearted by reason of the prevalent selfishness; the tender-hearted, who love righteousness, are bruised—wounded—broken. This heart-breaking is not injurious.

The broken-hearted are the more ready to receive the message of God's love and mercy. It is of this broken-hearted class that the Lord is making up His Elect Church. "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." So far from its being the mission of the Church to break men's hearts it is the very reverse. It declares "to bind up the broken-hearted."

Then will come the Church's future work, for which all of her present experiences are preparations—are being overruled by Divine providence. Present experiences with trials and difficulties, battling with the waves of trouble and obtaining Divine assistance to surmount them, will all be valuable preparations of the Church for her future work of glory. Then she will be perfect with her Redeemer on His heavenly throne. How much her own present experiences will serve to make this class sympathetic and merciful priests of God toward men "in the Ages to come" (Ephesians ii, 7), none but God can foretell.

MUST BE A LIVE WIRE

SUCCESSFUL MAN GETS FATE'S MESSAGE INSTANTLY.

He Is Quick to See Each Opportunity, Small or Big, for Advancement and Is Prompt to Act at Right Time.

In the present trend of the times when every movement is regarded by a pendulum of value there are thousands of opportunities going to waste for want of people to take them when they come. As a matter of fact the history of reverses in business might be summed up in two words, "Lost Opportunity."

Daily we hear the cry, "If I had only taken hold at the time." But when fate knocked at his door no one stepped.

In such cases the man who was asleep wakes up to the realization of the chance that has passed. There is no one who has not had the chance to climb higher some time or other. But when the psychological moment arrived he was not alive to the issue.

Contrary to the general belief, a man is not confronted once, but many times, with possibilities for better things. To succeed he must be quick to see and prompt to act.

The live wire in business is ready to receive the message the moment it arrives. In truth, he constitutes the third rail by which the wheels of industry are kept on the move. He feels every vibration that means advancement for himself; he plans recognizing the other fellow who is traveling in the same line. He recognizes that the square deal that he would be accorded because he realizes to the full what the step-by-step striving for success means. Thus the growing pains of each are minimized. If the business world were full of wide-awake individuals we would evolve economic principles of industry heretofore undreamed.

One of the great problems that confronts the people is the conservation of waste. Waste is the result of misdirected energy. That is to say, the attention has been focused in the opposite direction.

In a word, the man who might have saved the situation was "napping" at the time when he was needed most. Thus it resolves itself to a pivotal point showing that the man who is caught napping not only injures himself, but causes a sequence of loss.

Another momentous matter on the subject is the fact that many men are on the lookout for a big opportunity and overlook the smaller or seemingly lesser thing—which of itself is a fallacy. It is the small opportunities seized and realized that have made the big men.

They have grasped the little measures and have made them measures to the full. They have appreciated the small profit, and thus the larger has come in accordance.

It is a rare thing for a big success to come knocking at a man's door until he has heard and answered the small one.—Business.

Bump of Curiosity.

"This large bump running across the back of your head means that you are inclined to be curious to the point of recklessness."

"I know it. I got that by sticking my head into an elevator shaft to see if the elevator was coming up, and it was coming down."

He Was Hateful

"Don't talk to me, Ernie, I tell you!" said Miss Zimmerman, heatedly, after she had devoted fifteen minutes to telling him her exact opinion of him.

"But I'm not talking to you," chirped Ernie. "I haven't had a chance! It's been so long since I heard the sound of my own voice that I don't know now whether it's myself talking! Is it?"

"It doesn't make any difference," retorted Miss Zimmerman with infinite scorn. "When a person makes as much noise as you do and says as little it isn't necessary to bother wondering who's talking, because nobody listens: anyhow!"

"Wow!" said Ernie.

"How do you soak 'em! Straight from the shoulder! I almost begin to think that you're mad at me!"

Miss Zimmerman nearly choked. "Mad!" she repeated. "Have you just got it through your head, Ernie Casey, that I'm not making love to you? You didn't think, did you, that I was calling you pet names the last half hour? If that's your idea of a lady's way of expressing undying affection, you're behind the times! I'd have you know that I am mad, good and plenty! And what's more, I'm mad for keeps!"

"Well," said Ernie, "I am surprised. The worst is what you say about there being no hope of your ever getting over it——"

"Never!" cried Miss Zimmerman. "I know I have an easy going disposition and people think I'm meek, but when I get stepped on I know it and I have spirit enough to resent it and stand up for myself! And you needn't sit grining there, Ernie Casey. It's serious!"

"Now, Evangeline!" began Ernie, cooing like a dove. "You pain me by——"

"Oh, piffle!" interrupted Miss Zimmerman. "Pain your grandmother! As though you cared! As though it made the slightest bit of difference to you if every girl on earth got mad at you! You're just a paving block, Ernie Casey, and I'm glad I discovered it in time! Why haven't you got any more feeling in your heart—as for that, you haven't got a heart! It's some kind of a machine that keeps things running. Something like an alarm clock. And how much more convenient! It never disturbs you when you do hateful things to other people! I suppose that's why you can't understand that the rest of us are really human and can be hurt! It's really your misfortune!"

"I'm glad," remarked Ernie with becoming gratitude, "that you are sorry for me, Evangeline! Pity, you know——"

"Sorry for you!" cried Miss Zimmerman, agitatedly. "I'm not wasting any sorrow on you! There's people that better deserve it! I just despise you! I didn't know it was possible for me to be so downright furious at a man as I am at you! I——"

"Yes," said Ernie, as though convinced at last against his will. "I can see that you are actually annoyed. I didn't believe it at first, but——"

"Annoyed!" almost shrieked Miss Zimmerman. "Land o' godness! Is this your idea of 'annoyed?' Why, if I got any madder I'd explode! You needn't try to be funny, Ernie Casey!"

"I feel far from funny," declared Ernie. "I'm all of a tremble. I'm so nervous! I'm not used to being jumped at and eaten alive! Kind treatment is what I've been brought up on and I haven't a bit of doubt that I'll have a nervous chill when I get home!"

"You—you're a brute!" choked Miss Zimmerman. "You don't care! You just enjoy it!"

"Excuse me," protested Ernie firmly. "You mean I just endure it!"

"Well, I wish you'd go home!" snapped Miss Zimmerman, feeling for her handkerchief with her chin very high in the air. "Good-bye, Ernie Casey!"

Ernie, rising, walked over and looked down at her sternly. "See here, Evangeline," he demanded, "just what are you so mad about, anyhow?"

For an instant Miss Zimmerman glared back at him. Then a little bewilderment drifted into her eyes. She clutched the table back of her and swallowed.

"I—I can't seem to remember," she said vaguely. "We've said so much since that—I guess I'm all mixed up! But, anyhow, I had a perfect right to get lots madder than I did and I'll do it again if you do what you did to make me mad, whatever it was—and look out, Ernie Casey—you're knocking all my hair down—no-o-o, I won't k-kiss and make up—I won't—"

"Well, I did, anyhow!" said Ernie, calmly, "and that's what really counts."

SOUSA IN FAVOR OF RAGTIME

Noted Composer and Leader Denies Allegation of Dr. Gruener of Berlin—Catchy Music Liked.

Pasadena, Cal.—John Philip Sousa, composer and player of ragtime, who has the reputation of having played more ragtime compositions than any other musical director in the world, denied the allegation of Dr. Ludwig Gruener of Berlin that ragtime induces insanity.

Dr. Gruener, in a statement made recently after a study of insanity patients at Bloomingdale, N. Y.; Kankakee, Ill., and St. Joseph, Mo., declared that much of the hysteria in America was superinduced by ragtime music.

Sousa takes issue with Dr. Gruener, claiming that more people have become interested in classical music through their interest in ragtime than have ever been driven insane.

"I am not an idiot, I know, and I don't believe I am crazy," said Sousa when asked concerning the claims of Dr. Gruener, who is a noted alienist in his native country.

"Hysteria is the form of insanity that an abnormal love for ragtime seems to produce," said Dr. Gruener.

"He is way off," is the reply of Sousa. "People like ragtime because it is catchy and it generally leads to a greater interest in classical compositions."

"The effect of ragtime music, so called, unduly influences the auditory centers, spasmodically, and also the intellectual centers, which will produce a subnormal intellectual condition," was another of Dr. Gruener's expressions.

Sousa claims the contrary.

Cure That Failed.

The story recently published in a southern newspaper, to the effect that an ignorant negress had given her little girl a mixture of dog's blood and powdered bone to cure her of a fever, recalls an Indian prescription contained in an old volume entitled "Primitive Superstitions."

An Indian had been desperately hurt in a fight with a grizzly bear, and the medicine man prescribed a mixture of rattlesnakes' heads, worn-out moccasins and chewing tobacco, seasoned with pepper and bear's grease, of which the patient was to drink a pint every half hour. "He was a brave man," says the story, "but he died with the utmost expedition." The members of the tribe agreed that the remedy was faultless, and that death was due to the fact that the medicine man had failed to order that it should be administered to the accompaniment of a dance and a yell.

Snug Bed for a Queen.

Instances of something strangely like humor sometimes creep into the British periodicals, in spite of everything. Among the stories told by the London papers of the late Dr. Robinson Duckworth, canon of Westminster, is one of a somewhat unquartierly remark which he made once when showing Queen Victoria over Westminster abbey. When they came to the spot where kings and queens lie Queen Victoria shivered a little and said: "I should not care to be buried here—it seems so cold and damp." "Madam," replied Duckworth, "I assure you it is perfectly dry. You would be quite nice and snug."

It strikes a mere American that the queen's part of this interview shows more humor than the reverend canon's. But Victoria's sense of humor was Teutonic.

Old Leather Bottles.

Leather bottles, or blackjacks, were common in Europe two centuries ago. The bottles were often made of one skin doubled up and closely stitched together, leaving an aperture for the neck. The thick piece between was inserted for the slip. It was meant to be slung at the back, a leather thong passed through two loops placed on either side of the neck, and it was sufficiently flat at the base to stand when put down. The stopper was made of wood, horn or old leather. A great deal of care was required in the preparation of the leather, which had to be [illegible] and [illegible] with [illegible] to make it [illegible] and then [illegible] with [illegible] that [illegible] the liquor [illegible] its natural [illegible] the leather clean and dry. A Hair Trigger Constitution.

Some one has said that animals have a hair trigger constitution, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. They go off on the slightest provocation, because they act from impulse. They do not know how to control themselves. The animal instinct dominates.

Self control is the first condition of all achievement. It is said that the first sign of insanity is the loss of self control. When a person is no longer the master of his own acts he is not only in danger, but any degree of achievement is impossible to him.

Every thought tends to result in an act, so that thought always leads. The mental attitude at any moment is the pattern which the life processes weave. The lives of many of us are grotesque crazy quilts.

Lung Capacity of Corset Wearers.

The lung capacity of the average woman who does not wear corsets is about 2,800 cubic centimeters, or 171 cubic inches; of one who is in the habit of wearing corsets only 2,200 cubic centimeters, or 134 cubic inches, so that the capacity of the normal and unrestricted lungs is about 27.3 per cent more than that of those which have been compressed by the corset.—Scientific American.

A Technical Mind.

"What in the name of common sense are you arresting me for?" asked the motorist who had accidentally violated a regulation.

"I ain't arrestin' you in the name of common sense," replied the rustic sheriff. "I'm arrestin' you in the name of the law."—Washington Star.

HIS NICKEL WELL INVESTED

Yonkers Bachelor Once Helped a Newsboy and Reaped His Reward Nine Years Later.

"Excuse me, mister," said a boy of about fifteen years to a man at a Yonkers street corner, "but I've lost my money and I can't buy my papers if I had a nickel I could get a start and make 50 cents before bedtime."

Although the boy's clothing was soiled and tattered, his bright eyes and regular features made a good impression on the observant middle-aged bachelor. But he was skeptical.

"If I give you a nickel," said he, "you'd only spend it, probably in a foolish way. I've had experience with boys."

"I'll spend it all right, mister, but the money would go for papers."

The man gave the boy a nickel.

"Now, I'm only lending you five cents," was his warning as the boy hurried away.

"All right boss!" cried the boy. "I'll give it back to you tomorrow on this corner at six o'clock."

"I'll be here," said the man.

So they separated. Both kept their promises. The nickel was returned. That was nine years ago. Now the boy is a married man of twenty-four and he has a good position in Yonkers. Their conditions are reversed. Owing to illness and injury the bachelor has been out of employment for six months. Long ago his savings were exhausted. Long ago he would have been in want if a friend had not found where he lived. This friend also found that the bachelor was in debt and provided medical assistance. More than that, he paid the bachelor's board for 16 consecutive weeks and he has not stopped yet.

"What are you doing that for?" his wife inquired.

"Reason enough," he replied. "When I was a newsboy that man helped me when I was broke. Now, if necessary, I'll go broke for him."

The friend was the former newsboy.

Tennis an Ancient Pastime.

It may be claimed that lawn tennis is at least three centuries old, says the London Chronicle, having been played in 1591, when Queen Elizabeth was entertained at Elvetham, in Hampshire by the Earl of Hertford. Strutt quoting from Nichol's "Progresses of Queen Elizabeth," tells us that "after dinner, about three o'clock, ten of his lordship's servants, all Somersetshire men, in a square green court before her majesty's window, did fling up lines, squaring out the form of a tennis court, and, making a cross line in the middle, 'in' this square they, being stript out of their doublets, played, five to five, with hand ball, to the great liking of her highness."

When Grant Flinched.

At the beginning of Grant's administration a large body of ministers called upon him at the White House and made a long address, to which, says the author of "Grant, the Man of Mystery," the president was compelled to reply.

After a sentence or two, Mr. Fish, then secretary of state, noticed that his voice faltered, and fearing that he might be at a loss what to say, the secretary, standing next to him, created a diversion by beginning to cough violently.

Afterward Grant said to Mr. Fish: "How fortunate it was for me that you had that cough! I had felt my knees begin to shake, and I do not think I could have spoken another word!"

Extemporaneous expression was difficult to Grant until after his presidential career, when he became practiced in public speaking.—Youth's Companion.

BIBLE STILL BEST SELLER

Continues to Hold Its Lead as the Most Popular Book Ever Published.

The one hundred and seventh annual report of the British and Foreign Bible society, the largest, if not the oldest, of such organizations, shows that the Bible still holds its ancient lead as the most popular book ever published. During 1910 the society distributed, in 422 languages and dialects, [illegible] complete Bibles, [illegible] New Testaments and 6,782,730 single component books. Its receipts from [illegible] though its [illegible] are very low, it seldom actually [illegible] were more than [illegible], and in addition it has [illegible] about $700,000 in legacies [illegible] alone and from investment [illegible] its foundation, in 1804, it has distributed nearly [illegible] copies of the sacred writings, at a cost of fully $50,000,000. Its output today is [illegible] 1,100 and its new [illegible] of Bibles weighs nearly [illegible]

The Knights Templar weekly, says the Baltimore Evening Sun, while second to the Bible of the great British society, and is almost as old, having been started in 1804. Down to 1908 it had printed and distributed [illegible] copies of the New Testament and the Complete Bible and since then it has continued the work at the rate of nearly 2,000,000 copies a year. It has given especial attention to the translation of the Bible into the Indian tongues, and is now ready to supply New Testaments, at least, in every such tongue as has been reduced to writing. Of late it has also given attention to the Philippines, and its colporteurs now distribute Bibles in Egypt and all the other Asiatic islands.

Altogether the two great societies, with their Scotch, Prussian and Russian rivals, are now distributing fully 3,000,000 complete Bibles, 3,000,000 New Testaments and 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 portions of the Scriptures a year. Just how many copies of the book are otherwise sold in the world is not to be accurately determined, but the most reliable estimates place the number at 5,000,000 a year in the United States alone the yearly sales often exceed 1,000,000. No other book, sacred or profane, comes anywhere within miles of this stupendous record. The Bible outsells all the other best sellers. As a matter of fact, it is in a class by itself, nearly equalling all of them put together.

New York is building a new square here, but Broadway continues to be the home of the lobster.

It strikes us that swimming would be a pleasant pastime if it were not for the issue of gasoline.

His Ten-Cent Romance.

The panhandler was insistent.

"Why, brother," he said to his victim, "I never got so low as to ask a man for a dime before. N-no, sir. But I just walked in from Chicago—look at me shoes—an' me old wound is botherin' me again. Ouch! I got it in th' Spanish-Merican War swingin' it over our there in th' Philippines with old Gin'ral What's-His Name, an' every time th' weather changes I get a twinge. A dime ain't much—but maybe you're English. If you die you ought to be glad to know that I served under Kitchener at Ladysmith an' got a Boer bullet through me shoulder. Ten cents won't break you."

"Hold on!" cried the victim. "I'm English—I'm a Turk."

"Is that so?" said the panhandler. "Well, I can't say I ever served in th' Turkish army, but I got a brother who used to get up early every morn in' an' blow th' Golden Horn!"

Then his grimy fingers closed on the proffered dime.

Good Mental Tonic.

As appearance means so much to the average woman, mentally as well as socially, the question often arises, "Is she justified in aiding or improving nature if she sees fit?" Many of our well-known medical men think that "makeup" is as good a mental tonic to anyone can take and greatly advises its use, especially for the girl who has some slight personal defect—a scar, a poor complexion or bloodless lips, for the knowledge of her defects makes her shy and streetwise sulky and miserable.

We owe it to our friends as well as to ourselves to look our best at all times and the girl who can improve her appearance without harming herself, should do so. Nothing gives us quite the self confidence as to feel we look well.

Actresses are usually warm hearted sensible and cheerful. That is because they make the best of themselves in face and form. An old saying is true, "The face is often a reflex of the mind," and in some cases it is no less true that the mind is a reflex of the face.
